H. A. RISLEY,
Manager of the GAZETTE.

That Colorado has always been a favorite field for eastern investments depends largely on the fact of the intelligence and honesty of its inhabitants. It is true beyond question that the people of this state are in unusual proportion of American birth, and share very largely in the sentiment and ways of the best part of the American people. We have not received so large a proportion of ignorant foreign immigrants as have many of the states to the east of us, and have been free from the lack of enterprise and the false ideas in regard to labor which are too common in more southern states. To our exceptional natural resources has been added a population of superior enterprise and integrity. The name of the state has been free from suspicion of repudiation, and although an occasional buyer of mining stocks has had some ground for complaint yet Colorado has had a high reputation as a place for investment and Colorado people as a class have been considered as good people to lend money to. It is in the highest degree unfortunate that anything has occurred to change this condition of affairs. The prosperity of the state is so inseparably connected with the development of her material resources, and the supply of home capital is so inadequate to our needs that hardly any greater injury to the state could be done than to arouse a distrust which would check investments here. The agitation of the silver question in the unreasonable and intolerant way which has caused the silver people to be considered in the same class with Greenbackers, sub-treasury cranks and repudiators has had precisely this effect. Colorado people know that the politicians who have endorsed the third party movement are very far from representing the people of the state, but unfortunately the People's party folks are able to make a great amount of noise and at a distance the quality of their voices is not distinguishable. There is only one way in which this injurious impression can be corrected. The result of the election will be definitive and will determine in the minds of many people whether Colorado is a good place for new enterprises and investments or not. We believe that it will be a rebuke to those who have dared to assert that our state is poverty stricken and half ruined, and that our people are endorsing the Greenback and Farmers' Alliance theories.

We trust that the people of Colorado Springs will not fail to take a part in the celebration of Columbus day, which occurs on the 21st of October. Such an opportunity for teaching a valuable lesson in history and patriotism ought not to be neglected. So large a part of our liberty is dependent upon our public school system, and so much depends upon keeping that system in the best possible condition that it is fitting that the schools should lead in the celebration of the day. It is largely owing to them and to the instruction that has been given by them to the generation of Americans which have lived upon this continent since the day four hundred years ago when Columbus first landed upon it, that we have been able to do so much in the way of advancement, and that we have so much to celebrate upon Columbus day. The celebration is going to take place in many cities throughout the land and Colorado Springs should not be one of those which are behind the times in the matter.

It would be a mistake to attach too much importance to the nomination for assessor for this district. The interests of El Paso county are not vitally concerned in this matter. Any good man is good enough to command the party support here, and we see no reason why our delegates should make a specialty of advancing the interests of any one in particular or why they should be bound down by instructions. On the other hand there are nominations of county and state officials which concern us very closely and importantly. We want good men for our representatives in the assembly as much as in congress and we want good men in our county offices, with which we come in contact every day. The selection of a congressman is important no doubt but there is no reason why any other nomination should be neglected.

We have a double pleasure in advocating the nomination of Charles Sprague to the legislature, in the second place because he is a newspaper man and in the first place because he is well qualified for the position, and if nominated will, we believe, make an excellent assemblyman.

There is some complaint because of the interruption to trade from the quarantine precautions which have been taken against cholera, but the damage to trade from this cause is only small compared to that which would result from an epidemic of cholera.

El Paso county is entitled to twenty delegates in the Democratic state convention. We trust that our friends on the other side will be able to find that many.

Since silence is golden Cleveland's record as a monometallist is in a fair way to be surpassed by David B. Hill.

Do Not Be a Vandal

CHEYENNE COUNTY, [illegible]

To the Editor of THE GAZETTE:

DEAR SIR: The people living on the Cheyenne road who try to make their place look pretty by planting vines and trees in their fences are worried to death by some of this fiendish, [illegible] way, which have cost them a good deal of money and expense to grow. Breaking branches from the trees and in fact ruining in a few minutes the work of years. We respectfully call the attention of all your readers to this notice, and that the fact that the vines hang over the road is no reason they should be torn down as property owners are supposed to keep the road in repair. Truly yours, — R. W. [illegible]

Free and Equal.

After we had been settled at Barbadoes about a fortnight the natives began to pay us a visit. We had learnt the names of several of them, but had formed no especial friendships, when one morning a shadow fell across our window and on looking up to ascertain the cause we saw a stranger standing in a calm, easy attitude, surveyed us from two brilliant eyes with a mingled expression of pleasure and curiosity.

He was a black fellow, who bound with a fillet in the native fashion, and his features were somewhat of the Malay type. He was complexioned a shade darker than the night of his race. Cast over his left shoulder and fastened beneath the other arm hung the skin of a lion, its head and fore paws forming a sleeve, which, as he moved, showed a glimpse of his body, which was small and well shaped. He had a bunch of slender arrows over his left shoulder.

A wonderful train of question from which we struck his to tell people who were several times round the upper part of his bare arm, and his cheeks were puffed when he with a lady's [illegible] I [illegible] to make a [illegible] in his [illegible] right hand.

I [illegible] be [illegible] since I [illegible] myself [illegible] conscious.

Perhaps what struck us most in his manner was the complete ease. I regretted that he and our five were upon precisely the same social level, an idea which we were fain to accept in a complimentary sense, such being evidently our intention. — An American Parson.

Pet Troubles and Their Indication

Slight symptoms of baby's troubles are often noticed, but disregarded. Baby's troubles are often symptoms of coming illness, and often lives of children are prevented by checking the disease in its early stages. Sties often indicate stress of the eyes and if they have been noticed much they should be given a emphatic rest. They are also signs of an unhealthy condition of the system or a derangement of the digestive organs. Lives that are easily fretted are a symptom often of a weak anemic condition of the system.

If one can see only half an object it might indicate the beginning of paralysis and tumor of the brain. Unequal size of the pupils are good signs that insanity threatens. If the pupil does not react properly one can rest assured that there is some gouty or rheumatic trouble in the system. The reddish appearance of the eyes may indicate approaching hay fever, scarlet fever, measles or may be the result of an overdose of the bodies.

In insanity the eyes become fixed in a stare and they roll violently in convulsions and approaching dissolution. If there is a marked protrusion of one eye it may mean a new growth in the orbit. If there is an inability to move the eye outward a paralysis of one of the nerves is frequent. There are other smaller signs observable only to the physicians which indicate more serious trouble with the eyes or brain, but these are the general simple ones which every woman can study. — Yankee Blade.

Fashions That Are Out of Date

The underlying principle in the matter of what jewelry men may wear is the utilitarian one.

In the exhibitive sense the scarfpin is undoubtedly the most important article of jewelry worn by the well dressed man. The justification for its wearing, when it is worn properly, is beyond question.

The purely adventitious exploiting of the scarfpin as a piece of jewelry is happily numbered among the bygones. The memory of those days at the low cut waistcoat—the shirt covering scarfs seeming for all the world like huge chest protectors, into which big coral pins were thrust—representing the vulgarian epoch in men's wear at its zenith.

Then the diamond breastpin with safety attachment, some of them chained to the shirt front by a gold chain—came to be the cherished baubles of the crude fashions of the times. The idea of a diamond with a string to it—a jewel with a safeguard—telling at once of its value and warning off depredators—presents a comical contrast to the conservative character of the current regime. Clothier and Furnisher.

Little Difference in Melting Properties.

The manufacture of ice and its marketing at prices which in many regions easily compete with those of the natural product have simplified this phase of the water question in the most marked way. Other things being equal whether the householder decides to use the natural or the artificial ice will depend much upon the climate of his home and the market price of the ice. The natural ice is just as good as the artificial when it comes from pure sources. It is claimed by some that the natural ice melts more slowly than the artificial and in this way, other things being equal, is cheaper. But similar claims are made for the artificial ice. The writer has tested the relative rapidity of melting of the natural and the artificial ice in New York under the greatest variety of conditions, in small pieces and in large, in the dark, in the light, in diffused light and in the sunshine, in hot places and in cool and can find no absolute constant difference in the rapidity of melting. One seems to be just about as durable as the other.—T. Mitchell Pradden in Harper's.

A Case of Striking Back.

The prisoner was before the judge for assault.

"What did you strike the plaintiff for?" inquired the court sternly.

"He said something, your honor, that perverted the life out of me," confessed the prisoner.

"That is none of your business. What did you strike him for?"

"He struck me first, your honor."

"The court turned to the defendant."

"How is this?" he asked.

"I didn't do anything of the sort, your honor, I merely—"

"He said your honor," interrupted the prisoner, "he struck me for five dollars."

"Fine and costs," remarked the court and called the next case.—Detroit Free Press.

Where Being Shaved Is a Luxury

The Turkish style of razor is not generally used by the natives in India, but a flat blade is favored. It is very much like a knife and marvelously clean work is done by this apparently clumsy blade. As a rule the Indian barbers are quick and light fingered and shave tender most extraordinarily. Many a young officer is shaved in bed and when fast asleep so that he can snatch a few more moments repose before appearing upon the parade ground. To be shaved in bed and in fast asleep is a luxury which even the most luxurious American does not yet allow himself, but which many an Anglo-Indian could well put up with in India.—San Francisco Chronicle.

HUNTING THE ELK.

EXCITEMENT OF THE CHASE OF THE STATELY ANIMALS

Colorado Is the Place Where These Noble Creatures Are Found in Large Numbers. They Are Going, However, the Way of the Once Numerous Buffalo.

This is perhaps the greatest game country in the United States. Situated in the very heart of the Rocky mountains the least settled part the towering peaks and wooded slopes literally teem with deer and bear. But the onward march of civilization is making great inroads upon these prond denizens of the forest, and soon they will have joined the buffalo in the happy hunting ground. In a varied experience covering several years it has been my pleasure to study the habits of the great species of these animals and I believe of all the large game on this continent the elk is the most difficult to get near and the most difficult to kill. The moose, caribou, deer or mountain sheep has each points of excellence that rule out the elk as the chief of the sport, but the elk possesses more than any of the others. In [illegible] cunning and wariness he [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible]. His keen scent, his penetrating eyes, a keen ear, his cunning [illegible] make him one of the most difficult animals to kill.

He will travel twenty four hours with [illegible] [illegible]. His [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible]. He is as graceful as a fawn as he moves over the ground at an easy gait. With his antlers on his head and a look on his face he will gallop up rocks, down timber or brush with the great speed of a horse, and sometimes a man would have difficulty in following. He is often found among timber land and will travel over [illegible] passes and ridges climbing over walls of rock and through thickets where it would seem impossible for any animal of his size to go.

I will remember the first time I hunted elk long. I was almost out of the timber and was walking at a rapid gait down the very head of First Creek. I was in a region of huge cliffs and fully expected to come to the edge of a cliff at every step. My nerves were at a great tension as I descended a great canyon and crossed cliffs at that point [illegible] and forded [illegible] and I have no premonitory feeling at all.

Suddenly there burst up in my vicinity a clear, penetrating bugle of a bull elk. It was a most startling, weird peal in the silence, all the more so as the most solemn word I ever heard. It sent a thrill of awe through me, and the hair stood on end. I wanted to run but did not know which way to go as the sound seemed to come from every direction. I was bewildered as the sound echoed from cliff to cliff and went ringing away in the distance. As my pulses settled into motion I caught a glimpse of a moving object, which I soon made out to be a bull elk.

He was a noble specimen with immense spreading antlers and was coming directly toward me. I dropped down behind a rock and waited him. Just in front of me was a beautiful little park covered with a carpet of green grass plentifully sprinkled with flowers and into this he turned. He stopped, threw his head back, swelled his neck to an enormous size and once more emitted that mournful wail. While he was standing thus I took careful aim and fired. He dropped in his tracks. The bullet took him square between the eyes. His antlers had nine prongs to the side, and the tip was six feet from his head.

During the latter part of November, when the soft downy snow had piled up over a foot deep on the valley, I accompanied a hunting expedition to the headwaters of Elk river. Here the elk congregate in large bands preparatory for their winter trip south. We shoveled off a camping place and built a roaring fire. After supper we sat around on logs and smoked and told stories until late, and then rolled into our beds, spread on a thick layer of spruce boughs and covered with elk and bear skins all of prime fur, as dear to the heart of the sportsman. How we can sleep on a bed of pine boughs! Morning dawned bright and clear and long before sunrise we were in motion. We heard an elk bugle just over a little hill from our camp, and believing there was a band of them we took in that direction.

As we came up to the hill and looked over we saw a beautiful sight. There in a little valley was a band of more than 200 elk. Some were lying, some standing and others walking back and forth like sentinels watching over a sleeping army. Noiselessly we crept back and making a wide detour we surrounded them. The sun was well up by this time and as it shone upon the frost in rusted boughs of the spruce they shone and sparkled like clusters of diamonds. The pines are varnished with a glaze of sunlight and are tinged with a golden hue. It was a scene of marvelous grandeur and beauty. A signal was given and we all moved forward. An ever watchful bull sounds a note of alarm, and instantly the herd is in motion. They go slowly down the gulch moving in good order although the snow is three feet deep.

The leader stands proudly at the head of the band. Suddenly from in front there is a report, and we see a little puff of smoke ascend. The leader stops, turns around with his noble head lowered to the ground, his body trembles with a new and deadly sensation. The snow around is stained a bright crimson, and this magnificent animal, which a few moments now lay proudly at the head of his band, suddenly and heavily falls forward, a leap and falls over dead. The band thus suddenly deprived of a leader stands waiting for a moment and then breaks apart and one part runs up our hillside while the others go the other way. Now is the chance for the hunter and we who are above him look with eager expectancy to see him [illegible]. He rushes forward just as the elk [illegible] that they are so [illegible] come together again like the wings of a [illegible].

He is in the very midst of them and they [illegible] the shoot [illegible] jump fire one way and the other all around him. But the man who [illegible] could kill an elk [illegible] but their [illegible] good [illegible] when they are in the [illegible] of elk [illegible] with a butcher knife [illegible] and [illegible] a band of elk and take them [illegible]. — C. H. Leonhardy in Denver.

THERE have been a great many very beautiful souvenir books of Colorado Springs and vicinity issued, but none that are in any way similar to this. The pictures are all of large size, suitable for framing. The plates are the finest photo engravings that could be secured from the best photographs, by the leading process engravers of Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. The views are, many of them, to be found only in this collection, made from photographs taken expressly for us. There is no descriptive matter beyond a title line for each plate. The workmanship in printing and binding is the best that could be put on the book.

All Goods bearing this label are of Colorado Manufacture

By buying Colorado goods you keep your money at home. Millions of dollars are sent out of Colorado annually every year. Every time you spend a dollar for foreign goods you are making Colorado poorer by just so much. The people of Colorado can make it prosperity and give to neglected home industries. Every cent sent away for goods which can be made in Colorado, except in the shape of a profit is a loss.

LOCAL POLITICS.

The Republican County Convention Meets To-day.

At 10 o'clock this morning the Republican county convention will assemble at Court House hall. The business before the convention is the selection of a candidate for county judge, county commissioner, three representatives in the state legislature and delegates to the congressional and state conventions.

So far only eight candidates have announced themselves for the five offices to be filled. The contests are being waged with friendliness on both sides although with great earnestness. A meeting of all the candidates was held last evening, for the purpose of making such arrangements that there will be no confusion or conflicting of interests in the convention to-day. Mr. H. M. Blackmer will probably be chosen as temporary chairman of the convention.

The candidates for county judge are Judge James B. Severy, the present incumbent of the office, and Mr. Ira Harris, deputy district attorney. The friends of both are quite confident of success. Judge Severy will probably have a majority of the vote from this city, but Mr. Harris' friends claim a large following outside.

For county commissioner the candidates are E. E. Nichols of Manitou, the present encumbent, and Mr. W. S. Boynton of Cripple Creek. Both sides here also claim to be confident of success.

There are four candidates for the legislative ticket and three places to be filled, so that one of the three will be left out. It was whispered last evening that other names might be brought up to-day, and even a "straw" candidate or two set up. The candidates so far are Chas. S. Sprague of Colorado Springs, J. C. Reynolds of Monument, M. M. Baldwin of Woodland Park and A. L. Humphrey of Colorado City. The friends of each candidate are working hard.

Nearly all of the outside delegates had reached the city last evening, and were consulting with the candidates.

Death of E. F. Titus.

Mr. E. F. Titus of this city was found dead in bed at Cripple Creek yesterday morning. His death is attributed to heart failure. The remains will be brought down to this city and to-morrow Mr. W. R. Siney will start with them to Mr. Titus' old home at Jamaica, Long Island.

The news of the death was telegraphed to this city yesterday morning with the request that the coroner be sent up there. Dr. Marlow left immediately for the camp, but it is not supposed that he found any inquest necessary.

Mr. Titus came to this city first in 1873, but did not come to live here until three years ago, when he bought Mr. Calloway's interest in the firm of Calloway & Stark, butchers. The firm continued as Stark & Titus until the first of this year, when Mr. Siney bought Mr. Titus' interest. Since then Mr. Titus has become largely interested in Cripple Creek and owned a great deal of property there. He owned two fine farms at Jamaica, L. I., as well. He was about 54 years old and unmarried and leaves a sister who lives at Jamaica. He was of a very genial disposition and leaves a great many friends in this city to mourn him.

THE GAZETTE recently received a letter from a correspondent directed to this paper on the envelope, but addressed to the Humane society. The letter complained that the mules on the Pike's Peak carriage line were shamefully abused by the drivers, being beaten till their flanks dripped blood. The letter was referred to the proper parties. Mr. Hundley says that it is all nonsense to say that the teams or mules are overworked. There are over one hundred of them kept on the road, when seventy-five would do the work, just so that none of them may be used too hard. They are driven only eight miles, then rest four hours, and are driven eight miles back. The mules are used in the high altitudes because they are able to stand the storms better. They might be beaten sometimes, for there was nothing as obstinate as a mule and they had to be made to work.

The Denver and Rio Grande announces special excusion rates as follows: Republican congressional convention at Colorado Springs, one and one-fifth fare on the certificate plan; Democratic state convention, Pueblo, Sept. 12, one fare for round trip; grand lodge A. F. and A. M., Sept. 20 23, one and one-fifth fare on the certificate plan; this rate to include ladies accompanying members.

The delegates from the companies of the fire department and the fire department committee of the city council will meet at Knights of Honor hall this evening to discuss the chemical engine question. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock.

Royal Flute Player.

Frederick the Great made generous presents to all musicians except flute players. He played the flute remarkably well himself, and this produced so strong a bad effect that caused the disappointment to his brother artists. A fine flute was sent to Frederick and asked permission to play to the king hoping that Frederick would show his appreciation of his skill by some valuable gift.

Frederick received him graciously and listened attentively while he played a difficult piece.

"You play very well," he said, "and I am very glad to have heard a virtuoso of such ability. I will give you a proof of my satisfaction."

So saying he left the room. The musician waited, guessing at the probable nature of the "proof."

Presently the king returned with his own flute and played the same piece which had just been executed for him. Then he bade his visitor good day, saying:

"I have had the pleasure of hearing you, and it was only fair that you should hear me."—Youth's Companion.
